Will Emperor William Award Us that Professor Dr. Heffter is not the Island? Present Status of the Case

The Berlin correspondent of the Augsburg Allgemeine Zeitung, writing on July 15th, says: "

If the hopes entertained at the American Legation here are fulfilled, the decision of the Emperer William in the San Juan boundary question will take place in a few weeks-even before the decision of the Geneva Arbitrators on the Alabama question. The state of the San Juan question is this: After the counter statements of the two Governments had been presented on June 12th, in reply to the respective memoranda of the 12th of last December, the Emperor empowered three crown syndies to examine the respective claims from a legal and international point of view, and to give an opinion upon the basis of the arguments laid down respecting the construction of the treaty of December 15, 1846, which was submittid to the Emperor. To readers outside of Prussia it should be stated that crown syndies are members of the Herrenhaus and that they form an especial category of the members who hold their seats for life. The instructions in question (section 3 of the royal decree of 12th October, 1854), say: "As members for l'fe are * * individuals whom we select from especial confidence. From these we will create crown syndics, before whom we will lay important questions of law for examination, and also confide the examination and arrangement of the legal affairs of the House." According to the last report of the Committee of the Herrenhaus, there are at present eighteen members of the House who have been assigned to the Crown Syndies. Among them are the present Minister of Justice, Dr. Leonhardt, and his two predecessors, Von Bernuth and Count zur Lippe; Professors Bauerband (Bonn), Dr. H. Schulze (Breslan), and Dr. Hemeyer (Berlin); also some members of the Superior Tribunal and the Court of Appeals. The names of the referee in the Sin Juan question are, up to this where he could educate time, unknown; it is only known dren for a penny a week.

one of them, as Mr. Bancroft had the misfortune in the first memorandum of the 12th of November (not in the counter statement to the English memorandum, as was recently asserted), to express great praise for the erudition of Herr Heffter, by which the selection of Heffter as referee in the matter was rendered impossible. According to my information, the hopes of a speedy decision of the arbitrators is extremely premature; in diplomatic circles it is assumed that the legal opinion alone will require months for its pre-paration. The decision would be a relatively easy task if not only the consideration of the rights but also the present interests of the two States in respect to the northwest boundary of the territory of the Union as opposed to British Columbia, were to be taken into account. But this point is not involved. The decision, according to section 34 of the English-American treaty of May 8, 1871, must determine what territorial boundary the negotiations of the treaty of June 17, 1816, had in mind, whether the western line (Caul de Harra) claimed by the United Harra) claimed by the States, or the eastern line claimed by the English. It is a matter of regret that the arbitrator is not in a possition to give a Solomon's desien, but must be engaged in the difficult and probably vain at-tempt to ascertain to-day the intentions of the negotiators of Compulsory education is making headway in England, the London School having begun to put in force their power against negligent and refractory parents. Quite recently five persons were summoned before the Thames Police Court for having refused or neglected to send their children to school. Four of them made excuses that were deemed sufficient, and escaped with only an admonition to obey the by-laws; but the fifth, being contumacious, was fined five shillings. He said his children were not under his control, and that he would not pay for them. One of the defendants pleaded that, being only a "asual dock laborer," he had not the means for clothing his children and sending them decently to school; but the Solicitor to the Boars said that there was a school quite near the defendant where he could educate his chil-
